

JOHN S. SAYWARD, Editor.

FRIDAY, APRIL 6, 1844.

FOR PRESIDENT,
HENRY CLAY
OF KENTUCKY

FOR VICE PRESIDENT,
GEORGE EVANS,
OF MAINE.

SUBJECT TO THE DECISION OF THE BALTIMORE WHIG CONVENTION.

IT SEE FIRST PAGE.

The Gazette says that "Mr. Van Buren has avowed the most decided and frozen hostility to anti-slavery; he has pledged the veto in advance against any bill for liberating slaves—reviewed that pledge years afterwards, and deliberately reiterated it—has shown a heart colder than ice towards the whole subject. No Liberty man—no abolitionist, even, can think of him and the Presidency together. So cold a heart can have no affection of the friends of the slave."

In addition to this it may be remarked that he is equally cold and frozen as respects the welfare of the freemen of the United States. He is opposed to the whole policy of affording Protection to the industry of the country. He is opposed to the principles and details of the present tariff. He is opposed to the government taking any interest in regulating the currency. He is opposed to the distribution of the receipts of the sales of the public lands among the States. He is opposed to the interests and prosperity of the Government being made dependant upon the interests and prosperity of the People, but would have the Government exert its power to provide for its own wants and leave the people to provide for their own. He has no sympathies in common with the People, and should he be elected to the Presidency, a selfish and iron reign of vindictive party would commence, and the whole People, freemen and slaves have occasion to mourn. Every vote thrown in this State by men, who, independent of the one question of slavery, would prefer the fostering policy of the whigs, is, in fact, a vote thrown for Van Buren. His partisans have no hope of obtaining a majority of the electoral votes in Maine, and if the scattering votes shall prevent a majority, then the Governor will call together the Legislature and Van Buren electors will be chosen. The frozen hearted man will then get the vote of Maine, in direct opposition to the true interests of her People and her business prospects.

The Whigs of the Seventh Congressional District, although they have not succeeded in electing their candidate at the recent trial, have nevertheless shown a zeal worthy all praise and imitation. They are a noble-hearted, patriotic company, and by patient continuance in well doing they will yet succeed in helping establish the Whig policy in the government.

At Deer Isle, on the day of the annual election, the whigs succeeded in choosing the entire list of town officers. The town, by a large vote, instructed the selectmen to call future town meetings at the centre of the town, instead of one corner as had been done by the locos. Accordingly, the April election for member of Congress was called as directed, and the legal requirements complied with. The vote thrown gave Robinson, the whig candidate, one hundred and forty-six majority. The locos at Deer Isle did not dare risk their votes, as thrown at the January trial, and proceeded to the main island, where finding some of the old board of loco selectmen who had been out of office for a week, they made a rally at the old place of meeting and cast their votes for Cary, as one of the number assured them that he had so good an understanding with the Governor and the Council that the votes would be counted.

As all the votes given at both places give a majority of fifty-one for Robinson—should the locos at Deer Isle be unnecessary to secure Cary's election, the Governor and Council will probably throw them both out from the mere force of a corrupt habit.

The Gardiner Blade states that a letter has been received at Pittston, communicating the melancholy news that the schooner Ceylon, Captain Coburn, of that place, which left New Orleans on the 10th February, for Alexandria, was wrecked on the 23d, in a heavy gale in the Gulf Stream, the Captain, Oliver Coburn, the mate, Abbott Coburn, and three seamen—who were all the persons on board save one—were washed overboard and drowned. Alfred Currier, a seaman, who belongs at Hallowell, succeeded in lashing himself to the wreck, whence, after remaining eight days without food, and much bruised by the waves he was taken off by the brig Comet of New York, and carried safely to New Orleans. The Ceylon was loaded with sugar.

Fire.

The dwelling house of Warren McPheters, of Lowell was consumed by fire on the 27th ult. Mr. McPheters left his house for a short time in the afternoon, and went into the woods near by after a load of wood, while his wife was at a meeting in the neighborhood. He secured the fire, as he supposed, but on his return he discovered his house in flames, and had only time to save one bed. Mr. McPheters is a poor man, and the event calls loudly for the sympathies and assistance of his neighbors and others, as he has lost all he had to subsist upon, and left with nothing to support a large family, not even the grain he had saved for seed.

Connecticut Redeemed!! GLORIOUS NEWS!

The Boston Atlas received last night contains all the returns from Connecticut, except seven small towns, which will not change the result. Connecticut is a good Whig State and we give the gallant Whigs there a cordial greeting.

The result of the whole matter is, that there is no election of Governor—the Whig candidate, the Hon Roger S. Baldwin, wanting about four hundred votes of an election. Out of twenty-one Senators the Whigs have elected sixteen.

In the House of Representatives, we have a majority of from fifteen to twenty. The Legislature will, of course, secure us the Governor, and all the other State officers.

CONGRESS.

In the Senate, on Monday, the Bill to change the Post Office laws, reduce the rates of postage, &c., was considered.

Mr. Phelps, of Vermont, made a very able speech against the Bill and examined it in detail.

In the House no business of importance was transacted. The House was in Committee of the Whole on Territorial business most of the day.

The Bath Enquirer, a loco foco paper, speaks of Mr. Clay's visit as an electrifying tour, and does not seem to relish it. What does it think of the wanderings, spoutings and recent labors, all along shore, of Shepherd Cary? Speak out, man, or own that you are a hypocritical pretender.

The National Clay Minstrel, a popular and patriotic Song Book that is rapidly coming into use, has been received at Bugbee's periodical depot.

E. F. Duren has just received a supply of "David's Harp" a small Singing and Song Book, designed for Sabbath Schools and containing much music and select pieces designed for celebrations &c.

Mr. Bennett of the New York Herald has our hearty thanks for the repeated favors he has recently bestowed upon us in the way of extras issued from his office.

Bugbee has received the New Mirror for April 6. It is the first number of a new volume of an excellent one.

Our thanks are due to Hon Geo. Evans, Hon Luther Severance, Hon Hannibal Hamlin, Hon John White, Hon Robert Schenck for public documents.

A countryman driving a team, all the horses in which were very poor, except the leading one, was asked by a portly lawyer whom he met, why the lone horse was so fat and all the rest so lean. "Because, square," says he, "the lone horse is the lawyer, and all the others are his clients."

Lecture this Evening.

Mr. Philander Gould, formerly of this city, will deliver a lecture this evening, before the Whig Association, at their Hall, upon the Western States. He has travelled much in that region of country and is familiar, we doubt not, with all the matters of general interest. Mr. Gould is now a citizen of Washington D. C., but as he was a Bangor boy, we hope to see a full house. The public generally are invited to attend.

Messrs Smith & Fenno have received the second part of Lights and Shadows of European History, it being a number of Bradbury Soden & Co's publication of Parley's Cabinet Library. It contains an interesting account of the early History of Ireland, a fine representation of St Patrick and an honorable sketch of his life and labors. The sons of sweet Erin should purchase this beautiful little work.

There is something peculiarly sublime in the following delicate morceau from a young lady's album. We like an author who thus spurns at metrical chains, and soars proudly up into the lofty heavens:

"On Christmas-day we should be merry,
For the ladies try to make us, very;
And whoever is that could be sad,
Under such peculiarly favorable circumstances
must be very bad."

A Visit to Ashland.

Mr A. B. Allen, editor of the American Agriculturist, who travelled through Kentucky in the Spring of 1842 on a tour of Agricultural observation, gives the following account of his visit to Ashland:

This beautiful seat and plantation, of one of the most gifted and celebrated men of America, is about one and a half miles from Lexington, and is approached by an excellent Macadam road, leading directly by it. We called there in company with a nephew of Mr. Clay, Mr. Pindell of Lexington, who took us by a circuitous road, first showing us his own fine plantation, a little beyond that of Ashland. The buildings on it are handsome and commodious, and there was a choice collection of stock of all kinds, particularly of blood horses. One of the fillies, the name of which we have forgotten, struck us as being as promising an animal of her kind as we saw in Kentucky. Mr. P., had repeatedly exhibited her at the agricultural shows, and she had invariably carried off the first prize over all competitors. A division fence separates the property of Mr. Clay and Mr. Pindell, which we passed by a wide gate and came immediately into the woodland, or more properly speaking, park pastures of Ashland, the trees of which are mostly the reservations of the original forest. They are grand and majestic in their appearance, and give a dignity, comfort, and beauty to the landscape, which cannot be too much admired. It was still in the month of January, but the winter being a mild one, the grass was yet green, and a fine lot of blood horses and short-horn cattle were out feeding, and looked as fat and sleek as need be. The show of these, Mr. Pindell informed me, was not so good as formerly, Mr. Clay having been tempted, when high prices prevailed, to part with the greater proportion of his best animals. When we called at Ashland, Mr. Clay was passing the last of his term at Washington in his Senatorial duties; we, therefore, missed the advantage of seeing him at home on his farm where he is universally acknowledged to rank as high as in the councils of the nation. He has ever been the foremost in every good word and work in agriculture in Kentucky, and perhaps few have done as much to assist in developing and improving the resources of his adopted State. No one was more ardent and persevering in the introduction and growing of hemp than Mr. Clay—in the introduction also of improved stock, and all other measures calculated to promote agriculture, which, although well known at home, on account of his brilliant forensic talents, his labors and example in this department, have in a measure been over-shadowed and kept hid from the nation.

The mansion-house at Ashland is roomy and handsome, and such as a refined country gentleman may have been supposed to erect for his own comfort and convenience. The grounds are ample and beautiful, abounding with what we most admire in winter, a profusion of lofty evergreens. The views from the spot are charming, embracing the town of Lexington just beyond, and a fertile country of considerable extent in quiet repose around. In the absence of Mr. Clay, his respected lady received us very politely, and we found her presiding with equal dignity and grace over the household affairs, where, to her honor be it spoken, and also in the general management of the plantation, she as eminently excels, as her husband in the Legislative Hall—proving herself an admirable wife for one whose public duties have so often called him away from his home.

We are fearful of trespassing upon the sanctity of private life by dwelling longer upon this theme, and will only add that we felt no less honored than gratified by our visit to Ashland, and at our departure could not but breathe more strongly than ever, the wish that its possessors may soon be transferred by the voice of this great nation, to that exalted seat which their eminent talents and virtues have so well fitted them to adorn and fill.

Important Letter.

A writer in the Whig Standard, published in Washington City, addresses a letter to Francis P. Blair, the editor of the Globe, from which we make the following extract:

"You no doubt recollect, in 1827, Gen. Jackson made a serious charge, deeply implicating the character of Mr. Clay. General Jackson asserted, on the authority of Mr. Buchanan, that Mr. Clay, through Mr. B., had made to him overtures of a most disingenuous character. Mr. Buchanan, when called on in relation to the matter, denied that he ever made such a communication. Immediately after Mr. Buchanan's letter of disavowal appeared in the newspapers, General Hamilton of South Carolina, who was an ardent supporter of General Jackson, apprehensive that General Jackson would respond to Mr. Buchanan's letter in terms of harshness and reproach, and if so, would probably injure the party, with Mr. Buchanan's friends, addressed a letter to him, begging him, to remain silent. General Jackson immediately replied to General Hamilton's letter, in which he commented with considerable severity on the conduct of Mr. Buchanan, and recounts the charges which he had preferred against Mr. Clay's honor and integrity. Now, the object of addressing you this communication, is to induce you to prevail on General Jackson to allow General Hamilton to publish his (General Jackson's) letter. That such a letter was written cannot be questioned—that it contains a recantation of the foul charge is equally clear. The publication of this letter will at once satisfy all parties concerned."

A meeting of the Bangor Fourier Club, will be held at the office of Mr. DEANE, on Saturday, April 6th, at 8 o'clock. All are invited to attend. apr. 2. cowf J. W. WILLARD, Sec'y.
